

Explanation of the healing-springs in the fountain-valley

Seven springs rise about 100 m from the red beds of sandstone of the Franconian Heights, which is Europe's water- and weather divide. An old legend tells of an old sick horse, which was driven into the forest by his farmer and regained its health at the source of drinking.

The springs always strong and unite the minerals of the glauber salt and sulfur and iron containing organic matter from the forest to a healing framework. The largest and most powerful source of drinking water since old times:

Doctor-Fountain

It solved by ancient writings of doctors and unprofessionals unclean substances from internal organs, leading out on the blood, kidneys and bowels and was so healing, toning and blood circulating. (Besides drinking baths)

Musketeer-Fountain

It was already used after the Turkish wars for the healing of skin diseases suffering soldiers needed, and sulfur is the richest. It was particularly great success against rheumatism and aging veins.

Eye-Fountain

It was used against eye disease and visual impairment.

Historic Bath Fountain (rock arch)

was the rallying point for all sources to recast their 1951st above it stood the old heating plant for the healing waters. In ancient times the springs were probably used cold ("Wildbad"). The Kneipp (till 1968) continued from the scientific and practical knowledge of the healing power of cold water back to that tradition (see Weltbad Wörishofen) and used as hot, alternately warm and temperate water; depending on the physician's prescription and needs.

The Cook- and Cellar-Fountains

served to cold baths and cold cellar.

The wash fountain

flows away freely. Revising a source in the center was included in the drinking water network, which contains all the healing substances.
